6. Overtime Hours Summary (4-week period)

Emp ID	Name	Total OT Hours	Weeks with No Rest Day	Flag
EMP-101	Worker A	18	0	None
EMP-102	Worker B	44	2	Rest-day gap
EMP-103	Worker C	12	0	None
EMP-104	Worker D	51	2	Rest-day gap
EMP-105	Worker E	16	0	None

7. Findings

Across the four-week reporting period, Worker B and Worker D each recorded two separate weeks with 7 consecutive working days and no rest day. Both also carry the highest overtime totals in the sample (44 and 51 hours respectively). Under BSCI and Punjab Factories Act guidance, sustained work without a designated rest day is treated as a working-hours compliance gap regardless of overtime payment status, and would typically be escalated for further review during a buyer audit.

8. Recommended Next Steps

- Review scheduling practices in Sewing Hall B to ensure rest days are rostered consistently for all workers
- Cross-check biometric records against manual supervisor logs for Weeks 1 and 3 to confirm accuracy
- Flag Worker B and Worker D's records for HR follow-up prior to any external audit

9. Comparison Against Applicable Standards

Standard	Requirement	This Period's Result
Punjab Factories Act, 1934	Minimum 1 rest day per 7-day cycle	2 breaches (Worker B, Worker D — Weeks
amfori BSCI Code of Conduct	Rest day required; overtime voluntary and documented	Consistent with breach above
ETI Base Code, Clause 6	Working hours compliant with national law and no more than 48 hours regular + weekly OT	Worker D exceeded typical weekly OT ceilin

9a. Departmental Comparison (Context)

For context, a spot-check of the Cutting Section over the same four-week period showed no rest-day gaps across its 5 sampled workers, suggesting the pattern observed in Sewing Hall B may be specific to that department's scheduling practices during the rush order period rather than a facility-wide issue. This should be verified with a fuller cross-departmental audit before drawing final conclusions.

10. Root Cause Notes (Preliminary)

Initial review by the Sewing Hall B supervisor indicates the missed rest days for Worker B and Worker D in Weeks 1 and 3 coincided with a rush order for a buyer shipment deadline. Scheduling records show no formal rest-day waiver or documented voluntary consent was collected for either worker during those periods, which would be required to defend the practice as compliant under BSCI guidance.

11. Sign-off

This report has been compiled from biometric attendance records cross-verified against manual supervisor logs for the four-week period stated. It is intended to support internal readiness review ahead of an anticipated third-party audit and should be read alongside the Company's Labour and Employment Conditions Policy (HR-POL-002).
